Introduction to the Workshop

- Where We Are: One of the most important steps in updating the General Plan!
- Outcome: An updated diagram that specifies where and what types of new development will be accommodated and what places will be preserved—e.g., the “land use plan”
- Importance of the Diagram: By law, it is the ultimate authority by which the City can make decisions regarding development--consistency is required
- Today’s Objective: We need to hear your ideas and will continue conversations with the community during the next three weeks
- Following Steps: The community’s ideas will be shared with the General Plan Advisory Committee (GPAC), who will deliberate and draft its recommendations. These will be shared for your review and confirmation in the Fall

CITY OF SAN BERNARDINO GENERAL PLAN UPDATE LAND USE PLANNING WORKBOOK

The categories below present a "menu" of land use typologies that may be considered for development in the City of San Bernardino. These include a mix of examples from San Bernardino and other locations. These present a range of possible "ideas" and some may not be considered to be appropriate for San Bernardino. The photographs are not intended to represent recommended architectural design styles, only their general scale and character. In identifying a development type that you recommend for a property or area of the City, use the reference listed in the left column and note this on the base map.

Ref	Category	Illustrations
RESIDENTIAL
RR	Rural and Hillside Residential Large lot housing, at a density of 1 unit per acre or larger; typically located at the edges of urbanized areas and in hillside where units are sited in consideration of topography, natural resources, geologic hazards, and other constraints.
RS	Single Family Residential Neighborhood Predominately single family detached housing with schools, community meeting rooms, and parks.
RX	Mixed Density Residential Neighborhood/Planned Development Master planned community containing a mix of housing types often incorporating single family detached with duplex, multi-plex, courtyard, and small townhouse units with community meeting rooms, schools, and parks.
RML	Multi-Family Low Density Residential Neighborhood Apartments or townhomes, typically 2-3 stories; located as transition between single family and higher density residential and/or commercial corridors and centers.
RM	Multi-Family Medium Density Residential Neighborhood Apartments and condominiums, typically 4-6 stories; typically concentrated near and linked to primary commercial centers and transit stations to increase local walkability.

Ref	Category	Illustrations
RH	Multi-Family High Density Residential Neighborhood High rise apartments and condominiums, typically 8 stories and higher located in core community districts such as the downtown and rail transit stations with high ridership.
COMMERCIAL
CN	Neighborhood-Serving Commercial Small parcels within or adjoining neighborhoods, typically 1 to 5 acres in size, providing convenience-type retail, neighborhood offices, and service activities in 1-story buildings designed to serve the immediate neighborhood accessible by car, bicycle, and on-foot.
CH	Highway-Oriented Commercial Properties developed with multi-tenant retail, office, and other commercial buildings located in centers setback from or along frontages of primary transportation corridors; typically with extensive surface parking and few pedestrian-oriented amenities.
CP	Commercial Center/Pedestrian-Oriented Properties developed with multiple commercial and/or office buildings oriented to street frontages and internal plazas and public spaces. Promotes walkability and patronage of multiple businesses.
CO	Office District/Park Professional offices (corporate, administrative, financial, medical, design, and other) in low to high rise buildings, concentrated in key activity centers often with supporting uses and services; retail commercial may be integrated, but is secondary.
MIXED-USE
XC	Mixed Use Corridor Street frontage properties developed with commercial and multi-family housing distributed horizontally or vertically. Buildings are typically 3 stories and higher and designed to be walkable with wide sidewalks, active frontages, and minimal setbacks from the back of the sidewalk.

Ref	Category	Illustrations
XV	Mixed-Use Center Larger properties developed with a mix of uses including buildings developed for a single use and/or structures integrating multiple uses vertically. Typically, such projects establish a compact, walkable, "village-like" environment where buildings are grouped along street frontages and, plazas.
INDUSTRIAL
IN	Industrial Properties developed with multiple light manufacturing, research and development, offices.
IL	Logistics and Warehousing Properties developed for large format industries typically used for warehousing, and distribution activities. Often these uses require significant areas set aside for truck access and loading of goods and materials.
OTHER
P	Parks Properties developed for active and passive recreational activity serving a neighborhood or the larger community. Natural open areas may be preserved and integrated into the park. Ideally, a park is located within a quarter mile of every residence.

Exercise 2:

- Identify uses and character (select from Land Use Planning Workbook)

Some Considerations...

- How to accommodate existing and future housing needs for next 20-25 years—Locations, types and densities of residential development
- How to address continuing economic shift to on-line retailing, with reduced demands for commercial buildings—How to re-position/re-develop commercial centers and corridors
- How to capitalize on/leverage new economic opportunities (e.g., reinvestment in the downtown, around transit stations, airport-adjacent, and so on)
- How to maintain transitions among uses of different intensity and use to ensure compatibility
- New parklands and public facilities may not be designated (legal restrictions regarding the “taking” of private property)
